County Proposes Removing Paid Fire, EMT at Branchville Station

by Thomas X. White

Branchville Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad (BVFD&RS) Chief Richard Leizear has informed neighboring fire departments that the career (county-employed and paid) firefighters and emergency medical technicians (EMT) are slated for removal from the Branchville station on March 1. The firehouse is located at the intersection of Greenbelt Road and Rhode Island Avenue in College Park. Branchville provides “first due response” to Greenbelt West, including Franklin Park, Beltway Plaza and the Greenbelt Metro station.

Leizear and BVFD&RS President James Crisman were summoned to a meeting on December 28 with the Prince George’s County Deputy Fire Chief Benjamin Barksdale and informed of a proposed plan to remove the career firefighters currently staffing the station Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. until 3 p.m. Branchville is one of several in the county to be affected by the plan, which is scheduled to go into effect March 1.

According to Leizear, Barksdale said the Branchville department is close to other fire and EMS stations that could cover Branchville’s area when volunteer staffing is not available. The change is due to county budgetary constraints, he said.

Leizear indicates March 1 also is the effective date for adding paid firefighters to county stations based on the collective bargaining agreement between the firefighters union and the county.

Branchville’s chief noted that removal of career staff during daytime hours when volunteers are either at work or in school or otherwise not available could put Greenbelt West, the Branchville community and North College Park in jeopardy. If the plan goes into effect, he said, those business and residential areas likely will experience longer response times when callers in Branchville’s “first due response” areas call 911 for a fire or rescue emergency.

The Greenbelt City Council and city manager, aware of the proposed plan, are discussing the issue with neighboring cities. The topic likely will be placed on council’s meeting agenda for January 14. It could also be a topic at an upcoming Four Cities (Greenbelt, Berwyn Heights, College Park and New Carrollton) meeting scheduled on January 30.

Paul Downs prepares to venture into the Forest Preserve.

A Dream Come True . . . The Forest Preserve at 10

by Paul Downs

This year marks the 10th Anniversary of the creation of the Greenbelt Forest Preserve. I feel compelled to celebrate this event with my fellow citizens in the thicket of our forest preserve. As president of the Committee to Save the Green Belt, I am delighted that the forest preserve is 10 years old.

On a patch of woodland not in the forest preserve but pretty much surrounded by it, I erect a tent in which I light candles and spread a small mat for sitting. My tent has four windows facing the four directions: north, south, east and west. I pull up to the north window and begin to document my findings.

Fatigue and hunger soon set in. I pull out my cooker and pan and toss in onions, green peppers and white beans. The smell of cooking gives energy so I continue to log in my observations.

I try to be like a scientist, eyes focused on capturing some provable fact about the current status of the forest. Yet this is not working – the green onions I grew at Henry’s Hollow Community Gardens this fall are a huge distraction. How can anyone make an impersonal observation in the presence of such goodness! I am joyful and log in the northern view, which is serene and bountiful, then move to the south view where the darkness is spreading. A jubilant mist rises from the forest floor.

I ponder the history of our woods. We did a special thing. After many battles, here the forest stands in this soft night. What did it take to do this? How many fliers, bird walks, mushroom walks, meetings, phone calls, letters, Labor Day booths, jack o’lanterns and great ideas? How much struggling? How much help from so many people through five long decades?

I log the south view: “thoroughly rejuvenating.” I move to the east where I hear an animal in the darkening woods.

“It took a bond to do all this,” I think. If you went into these woods as a child in a heavy snowstorm, you were bonded forever to the forest. If you stepped past her gates on a spring morning, you were a goner – this forest would slay you with her many ways.

I log the east view: “stimulating

Blogger Eric Zhang Reviews Year 2012 for Museum

Greenbelt blogger Eric Zhang will discuss his photographic project to chronicle local life through 2012 at a presentation in Room 201 of the Greenbelt Community Center on Tuesday, January 15 at 7:30 p.m. This free lecture, the first of the museum’s quarterly lecture series for 2013, is sponsored by the Friends of the Greenbelt Museum.

According to his blog, Zhang’s goal when he first began documenting Greenbelt was to “produce a photographic record of Greenbelt in 2012 as the FSA (Farm Security Administration) photographers such as Arthur Rothstein and Marjory Collins did during the early years of the town’s history.”

Even a cursory look at Zhang’s blog makes clear that he did that and more. He seemed to be everywhere this past year with camera in hand documenting and recording events, meetings and activities both big and small and in all parts of Greenbelt. On his blog he added, “I am interested in seeing how this New Deal experiment has worked out 75 years later.”

Greenbelt’s Loss

In December Greenbelt lost two lifetime activists for peace, justice, equal rights and fair housing – Bertram Donn and Robert Auerbach. Their advocacy spanned a period of more than 50 years in Greenbelt. Both were a part of a small group of city activists who worked and demonstrated for these issues at a time when most Greenbelters either opposed them or were willing to leave things as they were. As tolerant as Greenbelt is and was, Donn and Auerbach were often looked down upon, particularly by politicians who considered their views too far out and unpopular to be supported. They often were voices in the wilderness.

In particular, the 1960s and early 70s were a turbulent time with assassinations, riots and demonstrations in Washington and at the university, mule trains, the National Guard encamped on Braden Field, riot police assembled at Greenbelt Junior High, implementation of fair housing legislation and enforced school busing. It was a time when feelings ran high and those such as Auerbach and Donn were considered eccentric, and even hated by some.

Looking back now at those times and what Donn and Auerbach championed – peace, justice for all and equal opportunity – one can only wonder, “What was all the fuss about?”

We as a community must vigilantly assure that all those who disagree with the majority, who march to different drum beats, are never prevented from lawfully expressing themselves. Freedom of expression is a cornerstone of democratic government. Our thanks to Auerbach and Donn for asserting these rights.

John Morton Van Schoonhoven

Dr. John Morton Van Schoonhoven, former principal of Center School, died on December 20, 2012, in Cove, Ore. He was 85. He had returned to Cove, his boyhood home, some 20 years ago following his retirement in Greenbelt.

Dr. Van Schoonhoven was born in Cove. His education began in the one-room Shanghai School there. He received a doctorate in education from the University of Oregon. He served as principal at a school in the U.S. and later at the American School in Tokyo, Japan.

While working as an assistant professor of education at Eastern Oregon University, he met and married Louise Young. They moved to Portland where Dr. Van Schoonhoven worked as director of Professional Standards for the Oregon Education Association. In the early '70s, he was hired by the National Education Association in Washington, D.C. as director of Student Programs where he also focused on changing the voting age to 18.

"Mr. Van," as he was known by students and staff, was then selected to serve as principal of Greenbelt Center Elementary School. The school became a model for providing after-school care to at-risk children. The school was selected by the U.S. Department of Education as a Blue Ribbon School, one of the top 200 public schools in the country. He retired in 1992 as plans for Greenbelt's new elementary school began to take shape, feeling that a new principal should be in charge from the beginning.

Dr. Van Schoonhoven is survived by his wife Louise and daughter Heidi. Their daughter Susan preceded him in death.

Condolences may be addressed to (Mrs. John) Van Schoonhoven, Mountain Spring Acres, 61155 Love Road, Cove, OR 27824-8211.

In Memoriam

Remembering
Fred Baluch

The late Fred Baluch’s widow Dorothy and their eight children tossed a party for him at Greenbelt’s American Legion Post 136 on December 30. Fred died November 18, 2012.

Fred was very clear that his memorial service should be a celebration, “a happy graduation to a more glorious place” Son Steve read his father’s words to almost 80 friends and family who ate, drank and reminisced about Fred. “This event should be a time of jokes and laughter,” said Steve. He thanked his dad for feeding and clothing his “eight little miseries” and hoped they hadn’t caused too much trouble. “Dad also occasionally fed and clothed some of his students when he was principal at Emery Elementary School in Washington, D.C.”

Son Rob, who inherited his dad’s poetic DNA, read a poem entitled Builder. “I always thought of my dad as a builder, as a foundation who helped others.”

Son Jim claimed that Fred met the love of his life Dorothy at age five in kindergarten, crawling under a table. Dorothy herself said she doesn’t remember that, “but it makes a good story. I know we were together 65 years.” She became seriously interested in Fred when they became pen pals during World War II. “I felt it was my patriotic duty to write to as many soldiers as I could, but Fred was the only one who wrote back. When he returned he really looked good in a uniform.”

Legion Post Commander Mike Moore expressed his gratitude for Fred’s wartime service and presented Dorothy with a neatly folded American flag.

The slideshow presented by the siblings included a wonderful home movie clip of Dorothy and Fred dancing energetically on the lawn at their outdoor wedding reception.

At age 23 Fred was a warrior and husband. Becoming a teacher, home builder, father, poet and mystical communer with spirits lay in the future.

WSSC Seeks Comment On New Regulations

On January 24 from 7 to 10 p.m., the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (WSSC) will hold a community meeting to receive public input on proposed changes to its Watershed Use Regulations. The regulations were recently revised following a study by EA Engineering and meetings with various stakeholder groups and will be available online at <http://wsscwater.com/> by January 17.

The meeting will be held at the WSSC Auditorium in Laurel. People may speak for up to three minutes by signing up at the meeting or emailing name and contact information to communications@wsscwater.com or call 301-206-8100.

Email written comments or send them to: Watershed Comments, WSSC, Office of Communications & Community Relations, 14501 Sweitzer Lane, Laurel, MD 20707.

The deadline for comments is midnight January 24.

Once signed by the general manager, the regulations will become effective 30 days after being published.

Greenbelters were saddened to hear of the death of Robert G. Gochmour on December 31, 2012. He attended school here and moved to Edgewater about 10 years ago.

Condolences to the family of Margaret Brown Smith, an original Boxwood resident, who died on January 7, 2013.

We were sorry to hear of the death of William E. (“Bill”) Sweeney, Sr., 82, of Bowie on January 5, 2013. He was a 1948 graduate of Greenbelt High School and was a member of the “Old Grizzlies,” a group of friends from Greenbelt High sports teams who still meet regularly at American Legion Post 136.

Congratulations to native Greenbelter Jesse Goldberg-Strassler, a former News Review carrier, Camp Encore drama counselor and Eleanor Roosevelt High School graduate, who has just published his first book, The Baseball Thesaurus. It’s a compendium of baseball terms in which Jesse, experienced as a broadcaster, storyteller, talker and occasional voice for City of Greenbelt videos, explains what baseball terms mean and how they came to be. Goldberg-

Strassler currently serves as the voice of the Lansing Lugnuts, a minor league affiliate of the Toronto Blue Jays and writes about baseball for Ballparkdigest.com and thegoodpoint.com.

Send us your reports of new babies, awards, honors, etc. to share with our readers. We’d especially like to hear more from our neighbors in Greenbelt East and Greenbelt West (Franklin Park). To send information for “Our Neighbors” email us at newsreview@verizon.net or leave a message at 301-474-6892.

In Memoriam

Bertram David Donn:
Celebration of a Life

by Thomas X. White

F a m i l y , friends, neighbors, colleagues and compatriots gathered in an overflowing congregation on Saturday, January 5, 2013, at the Paint Branch Unitarian Universalist Church to celebrate the life of Greenbelter Bert Donn.

Bert Donn

Reverend Diane Teichert officiated during a stirring ceremony highlighted by poetry readings, classical music, several eulogies, memories and prayer. As one would expect, the flow of the program focused on the dedication, total commitment and perseverance of Mr. Donn’s lifelong service to the principles of peace, justice, fairness, brotherhood and racial harmony not only in Greenbelt, but in the larger community of Prince George’s County and beyond.

The eulogy was given by Rabbi Binyamin Biber of the Washington Congregation for Secular Humanistic Judaism. Memories of Mr. Donn’s life were provided by Lucy Duff, of the Prince George’s Peace and Justice Coalition, which grew out of his organizing the Greenbelt Peace & Justice group. McArthur Bishop represented the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and related Mr. Donn’s role in that organization. Other speakers remembered his participation in the Greenbelt Fair Housing Committee and his vital role in smoothing the way for desegregation efforts in Prince George’s County and leading efforts to assure support for required busing of school children in Greenbelt

City Notes

Animal Control staff reports three cats were adopted and a baby goat was impounded and then transferred to a wildlife sanctuary.

CARES

During the month of December, 10 families per week on average were seen for counseling at CARES. Forty-two individuals on average came on a weekly basis among whom 15 were 18 years of age and younger. The Crisis Intervention Counselors saw 19 clients and 44 students participated in tutoring services.

M a r l a Moore, a former Goddard Space Flight Center colleague, remembered Mr. Donn’s scientific achievements and his dedication to his work and to his co-workers. Other speakers echoed those comments and described their contacts with Mr. Donn at work and at play.

He played a role in the Greenbelt Community Pledge that was developed by the city’s Community Relations Advisory Board. That pledge is posted in all city buildings and can be found on the city’s website. Likewise Mr. Donn and the Peace & Justice Coalition provided the genesis for the celebration of Peace Month in Greenbelt every October.

Near the close of the ceremony there was a reference to a quote attributed to the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., “without justice, there can be no peace.” To that was added, “without peace there can be no justice.” That would be a tenet held and lived by Bertram David Donn.

I face west as candles flicker. “What was behind this effort to save the woods?” As a young lad, canvassing door to door, I recall an older gentleman who was delighted that a new generation had come forward. He invited me in and told me about the huge efforts of citizen intervention to save these woods before I was born.

A gentle wind stirs and something moves closer to the tent. The moon lumbers toward the horizon. I realize that whatever had stirred in the hearts of Greenbelters had saved these woods. Recalling how good a friend the woods had been to me, nourishing and enhancing my world, I wonder, “Who saved who?”

As the moon kisses the horizon, I see a deer foraging close by and get goose bumps. “What are the chances?” I think as he stands in silhouette in front of the moon. “Is he saying ‘Thank you, Greenbelt?’” I try to wave off that superstition but, as if on cue, an owl calls from a nearby tree. Another owl answers from a distant hillside. Hoo-hoo, hoo-hoo or was it, thank you, thank you?

I ponder other questions. “What made citizens spend nearly half a century to save these woods?” Closing my eyes, I tilt my head back and give full attention to the owls and feel cradled in the arms of nature.

I wish every Greenbelter could feel this. Time seems to stop and the moment comes to stillness.

After a bit of nourishing calm, it seems right to hike out into the night forest. So in a zen-like manner I pack up everything and hoof away toward the creek.

“What of Greenbelt can be said?” I think, moving through the exhilarating night forest. I reach the end of a ridge which looks off into the valley and light a red lantern and hang it from a bough with ceremony. The great silence of the woods gathers around the rosy glow.

“Hello, Great Woods! This night finds me in good cheer and I hope you, too. People back in the village are preparing to celebrate 10 years of adopting your once-orphaned self into the family of Greenbelt. They are making plans to commemorate the great occasion. They erected a Forest Preserve sign at the gates of your cathedral and I believe they really mean it. Do you think they know what a great thing they did, dear woods?” From the silence comes the far-off call of an owl and I whisper, “Do you think they know?”

I look back toward the village homes in the distance, their lights rimming the forest’s edge and feel all my doubt and skepticism about humanity fall away. Standing in the night, looking at the lights of the village, I realize that a tender bond is what triumphs here. Here, at least here, love won the day. I sense the earth smiling down on Greenbelt and in the glow of the red lantern I pull out my camping stove to make some tea.

Make a Resolution to Bring Your Talents to a New GHI Committee

By Sue Ready, President

Recently the Board of Directors reestablished two GHI committees and is currently seeking members to serve on them. Both committees offer fun ways to become involved (or more involved) in the activities of your cooperative. These committees are:

The Member Outreach Committee is responsible for fostering a cooperative spirit, encouraging member participation in GHI, and providing avenues for member input.

The Marketing Committee responsibilities are to promote the cooperative, to attract new members and to support members who are preparing to sell their memberships.

You can also be one of the volunteers who works on a specific committee task without serving on the core committee. We're happy to accept any level of commitment that you are able to make.

If one of these committees sounds like your "cup of tea," give me a call (301-345-1612) or shoot me an e-mail (suready@verizon.net). I'll be happy to tell you more about these committees and/or sign you up. And recruit a friend to join you—it's more fun that way!

This Winter be Warmer in Your Home

By Jo-Anne Fournier

In January 2012, the GHI Buildings Committee sponsored a workshop to provide hands-on demonstrations on a number of topics to keep your GHI unit warmer, including:

- Getting the most out of your electric baseboard heaters
- Insulating your attic hatch
- Preventing cold air from coming into your home
- Other low-cost strategies to be warmer in winter

This useful information can be easily found on the GHI website at www.ghi.coop. Using the Search feature type "Being Warmer" and you find information on Tips and Resources for Being Warmer in Your GHI Unit This Winter, as well as instructional videos.

All members should take a few minutes to review this information and make plans to be warmer in your home this winter, save energy and cut down on your electricity bills.

Pepco Infrastructure Improvement Project Update

Greenbelt residents and GHI members will soon be benefiting from infrastructure upgrades to the Pepco power distribution system in the form of new poles, transmission wires and transformers. Representatives from Pepco, the City of Greenbelt and GHI met throughout 2012 to prepare for what will be the largest power infrastructure upgrade that Greenbelt has seen for more than fifty years.

The first phase of the project - tree pruning in the vicinity of Pepco power lines by Pepco contractors—began in November and should be completed early in 2013. The second phase of the project—replacement of poles, lines and transformers -began in December and will take at least six months to complete.

Nearly every court in GHI will see some manner of upgrade work. Residents and members should be prepared for increased construction related traffic, parking restrictions and minor disruptions to power service as the project progresses.

General questions regarding the PEPCO project in Greenbelt may be directed to: Matt Berres, mberres@ghi.coop, 301-474-4161 x132, for Greenbelt Homes, Inc.; or Lesley Riddle, lriddle@greenbeltnmd.gov, 240-542-2152, or Celia Craze, ccraze@greenbeltnmd.gov, 240-542-2040 for the City of Greenbelt. Emergency concerns should be directed to Pepco at 877-737-2662.

Are You Ready for Snow?

Winter is here and with it is the need to be prepared for snow. Managing winter weather is a cooperative endeavor in GHI. Staff is responsible for plowing courts and clearing common sidewalks connecting homes, with priority given to courts and service side walkways. Once those have been cleared staff will turn to gardenside and common walkways. GHI snow removal efforts will begin once four inches of snow have accumulated.

Members are responsible for removing snow and ice from sidewalks within their yard boundaries, on both gardenside and serviceside. On shared walkways between individual units, responsibility is shared by adjacent neighbors. Members are encouraged to lend a helping hand to neighbors who may be physically or otherwise unable to clear sidewalks.

GHI members can help support snow removal efforts by avoiding piling snow on any portion of plowed streets or courts. Placing snow in these areas only hampers snow removal efforts, increases costs for all members, and creates a nuisance for other members or visitors to the court (including mail carriers and other service providers). When clearing off cars, please place snow toward the curb or common areas in the court.
